4:06 The Sunday Feature: The 2016 Reith Lectures: Mistaken Identities

Lecture Four: Culture Philosopher Kwame Anthony Appiah explores the confusions of identity through an examination of four central kinds - creed, country, color and culture. Through the lives of particular people in particular places and times, we see how the confusions play out, but also how they can be cleared up. Based around the story of Sir Edward Burnett Tylor, the father of modern social anthropology, Appiah argues that the idea of "Western civilization" or "Western culture" is a mistaken one and that we should abandon it. #### Out of the Silence

25 years ago Terry Waite returned to the UK after nearly five years of captivity in Beirut. He had been sent by the Church of England to negotiate for the release of several hostages - but he was kidnapped and imprisoned himself by Hezbollah militants. This November, Terry Waite will release his second publication; a book of poems entitled, 'Out of the Silence'. Samira Ahmed meets Terry at his home in England and explores his deeply held faith throughout his turbulent journey. Terry describes how the central Christian teaching of forgiveness drove him to return to Lebanon to meet with both Hezbollah officials and Syrian and Iraqi Christians. (BBC)
