4:06 The Sunday Feature: The Compass

Islam, People and Power: The anti-government protests that began in the Arab world in 2010 triggered division between the religious scholars of Islam's largest branch – the traditional Sunnis. Some of the most senior Sunni scholars in the world held fast to the idea that revolution, and even simple protest, was forbidden in Islam. Others decided to back armed groups in Syria, though not the global jihadists of al-Qaeda and ISIS. Presenter Safa al-Ahmad travels to Egypt to meet Dr Abbas Shouman, one of the most senior scholars at Islam's most famous seat of learning, Al Azhar University. She also tells the story of Sheikh Ramadan al-Bouti, a famous Syrian Islamic scholar whose stance on the uprisings cost him his life. (BBC)

5:00 The World at Five

5:11 Heart and Soul

Finding Allah at 33rpm

Abdul-Rehman Malik takes us on a musical journey to how he and other believers have found Allah through music. Malik discovered the music of Islam by diving into his father's old records and tapes. He recalls how music disappeared from his home for a number of years, replaced only by recordings of reciters of the Koran and why it has made a comeback in the past few years, as his parents rediscovered their musical heritage. (BBC)
