A roundup of today's news and sport

5:11 Heart and Soul

An Equal Partnership?

Dotted around London, in the concentrated areas where Orthodox Jews have made their home, groups of believers meet to pray and share their faith. What make these gatherings significant are that women are leading the prayers, and they are sharing their celebration with men. These prayer groups are called Partnership Minyans, and have become a symbol of a major shift in Judaism making many traditional believers extremely uncomfortable. With a panel in London, Emma Barnett asks what does this mean for this deeply traditional faith? Does this challenge to the structures of worship signal a new era of feminism with Orthodox

Judaism? (BBC)
